Episode 01

You know right now just about every large American city has a threat of communism. It's an insidious thing dangerous and a little bit frightening. In some cities it's worse than others. In Los Angeles where Chuck Morgan works as a newscaster on radio station KLP they feel that the threat is more than frightening, it's a menace that must be stamped out if their way of life is to survive. Most any day you can turn the dial on your radio or pick up a newspaper and read that the committee of un-American Activities is investigating some well-known Hollywood celebrity. It gives you a queer feeling when you see those familiar names. You wonder who's going to be next and why and you find yourself groping for an answer to this disease that is doing its best to undermine Americanism. Those were the thoughts that were running through Chuck's mind when he came in to his office a few weeks ago and found the script for his seven o'clock broadcast lying on his desk. He read it through and got a jolt that set him back on his heels.

Episode 05

Chuck Morgan was beginning to think that his reputation might be at risk if he didn't pull off some kind of scoop soon. Then arriving at his apartment on Friday night looking forward to a nightcap and his bed he discovers a good-looking gal in his apartment with a favor to ask for a friend. Her name is Queenie O'Rourke and she informs him that he was with her last Friday night and then leaves him an envelope to open after she has left with a warning not to be sucker enough to get any ideas. When Chuck opens the envelope $10,000 in $100 notes falls out. What could have happened last Friday, some incident that made it worth $10,000 to Queenie for an alibi?

Being a newscaster on a radio station the size of KLP puts Chuck Morgan in line to meet a lot of people. Statistics show that there are more than five million active criminals in the USA. These include the sneaking small time petty thieves and the big time operators who head up murder incorporated. They also included the racketeers that group of sadistic unscrupulous parasites who prey upon the weak the innocent the honest citizen. To Chuck's way of thinking they are the worst, the ones we can best get along without especially those who deal in human emotions...

Espionage

Espionage is the story of a crime against our nation. It is 1939 and that year the continent of Europe already echoed the cries of people under aggression. On the continent of Asia far beyond our western shores was Japan, a dedicated nation and people dedicated to war against the United States. But we did not know this yet. Within our western gates were more Japs, thousands of them. Were they dedicated to being good American citizens or were there among them some dedicated to our destruction? Here was a vital test for the FBI. The safety and security of America might depend on what they found out.

In the course of an ordinary year the FBI handles big cases and small cases. Big cases like the trapping of the German saboteurs who came here to steal the secrets of the atomic bomb and small cases such as the one you're going to hear about now. The important thing about this case is not the sum of money involved or even the people involved for the criminal is a petty thief. The important thing is that the FBI took as much time and effort as it did on this comparatively minor infraction of the law. Matter of the Medium, Well Done, The - Episode 1

It looks like Johnny Dollar is about to try his hand as a psychic investigator. Pat McCracken at Universal Insurance has invited him over to discuss a case involving a client of Tommy Green of Mid Eastern Life New York. The client, a sweet young thing by the name of Carol Sharp age 26 or 27 and spoiled, lives alone in her New York Penthouse as a playgirl. Tommy holds a hundred and ten thousand dollar policy on her, straight life to benefit her mother and brothers on her death. But now she has instructed Tommy to change the beneficiaries. Thirty thousand to a guy named Tony Ricardo and the other beneficiary is a so-called medium Madame Cecilia. The last case of this happening ended up with the client dead and the medium being convicted of the murder. Tommy Green was afraid that Carol Sharp was being taken and so wanted Dollar to investigate.

Johnny Dollar along with every policeman in the country knew the name of Ed Julian who had quite a name in Chicago, Los Angeles and Hoboken. After getting out of jail three or four years ago he was now a very legitimate fellow. Sam was afraid that something was gonna happen to him describing him as a lousy long-sighted bet considering the enemies he made. Julian was living in San Francisco now and Sam Ruben wanted Johnny Dollar to go and get him to cancel the policy, which he took out in his real name of Eduardo Salkovetti.

Sea Legs Matter, The - Episode 1 of 5

Two claims had been place by Constance Lanfear, the wife. The first against Douglas Lanfear's life policy for $250,000 and the other was for $150,00 against National Maritime Organization for the loss of the Lanfear yacht. Lanfear was making a trip along the coast of Central America in his yacht, the Sea Legs when he ran on to a rock, the boat sank and he and his crew of one went down with her. The Insurance underwriters were suspicious as two and a half years ago Lanfear himself put in a claim with International Maritime for $85,000. It seems he lost a power cruiser in exactly the same place near the Buldaro Islands off the coast of Nicaragua, a place where none of the wreckage could be salvaged.

The Terrible Torch Matter

Fred Larkin New Jersey Fire and Casualty called Johnny Dollar to handle a case. He had done some work for them previously in a little town down south called Woodbine. It was a case where some crook with a mattress factory billed his clients more than they actually paid for the stuff he sold them then not knowing about that little trick Fire and Casualty Insurance had given them Insurance for the amounts shown on the bills, double what they had paid. Then when something happened to the merchandise they collected twice as much as what they were entitled to. This time Fred Larkin wanted Johnny Dollar to investigate a couple of fires that were possible arson and he promised Dollar a nice big fat commission if he proved Larkins suspicions to be correct.

Johnny Got His Gun

Arch Oboler's dramatization of Johnny Got His Gun written by Dalton Trumbo is deeply moving and excellently acted by James Cagney. It tells the story of Joe Bonham who 22 years ago had been enlisted in the Great War and who returned "a block of flesh" with no arms and no legs and no eyes with which to see and no mouth with which to speak. He lies alone in a room in a hospital. The whole world is shut off to Joe Bonham and he has only the world within his own mind. This story is of the thoughts of a boy who twenty-two years ago went to war. . .

Brave New World - Part 1

Aldus Huxley introduces and narrates the classic novel he wrote 25 years earlier. Based in AF 632, six-hundred and 32 years after Ford. In the words of Mr. Huxley himself "Brave New World is a study of the future as it may be unless we are extremely careful. It depicts a society in which man has replaced nature by science, morality by drugs, individuality by total conformity. It is a hideous prospect and yet we seem determined to follow this path of self-destruction. The brave new world need not be our future the choice after all is always in our own hands". Report of the Weans

If you've never heard this whimsical story before then it comes highly recommended. It is a look at our world from six thousand years in the future. In the same way as our archaeologists dig up and interpret the lives of Egyptians living four thousand years ago these archaeologists of the future are digging up old books and records from our times and trying to make sense of them. The way they interpret such things as Elvis Presley singing Blue Suede Shoes really does make one wonder how accurate our opinion and knowledge of the Egyptians is. Roughing It

CBS Radio Workshop offers to writers of western films a do-it-yourself kit through the courtesy of one of America's greatest humorists Samuel Clemens author of the great western entitled Roughing It and otherwise known under the pseudonym Mark Twain.

"This is Samuel Clemens speaking. Word comes through our colony of late residents of the United States that the art form known as the motion picture makes a pretty good thing of bringing the great American West to the attention of the attention of current inhabitants who are fortunate enough to live somewhere else. As I understand it the moviemakers have found three basic ingredients necessary to their presentation of life in the west. Ingredient one: scenery. Ingredient two: a good man in a white Stetson and a bad one with ten gallons of black felt on his head. Ingredient three: a rousing chase over ingredient one and involving ingredient two..."

Subways Are For Sleeping

Subways Are For Sleeping is a true story of one man's strange adjustment to mid-century materialism in the largest city in the world.

Have you ever gotten fed up with rent, taxes and bills and the clatter of telephones with all that a man's large and small that our complicated civilization puts upon us? Henry Shelby finally did. When they locked him out of his hotel room he stayed out. For the past three years he has by choice been homeless and without a steady job. Yet, Henry Shelby is no bum he is as well dressed and as smoothly shaven as the next man you'll meet. He is not stupid, he owns a masters degree in economics and is a former schoolteacher. He has never visited a soup kitchen or stood in a breadline or asked for a nights lodging at a mission. Still he has learned for himself how to maintain his sanity and peace of mind in a confused and confusing society, which takes from a man more than it gives. Henry Shelby has reversed the process and this is how he does it. . .

Dr. Kildare

Dr Kildare is based on the Metro Goldwyn Mayer films. It is set in Blair General Hospital, one of the great citadels of American medicine and described as a clump of grey-white buildings planted deep in the heart of New York. It is the nerve centre of medical progress where great minds and skilled hands wage man's everlasting battle against death and disease. Where life begins, where life ends, where life goes on. Each episode begins with Dr Kildare's medical oath: whatsoever house I enter, there will I go for the benefit of the sick, and whatsoever things I see or hear concerning the life of men I will keep silence thereon, counting such things to be held as sacred trusts.

Cyrano De Bergerac

Host: Robert Young They say that beauty is only skin-deep but ask the man or woman who lives with deformity and learn how much deeper goes the scar of ugliness. One of the greatest of human tragedies is to possess a soul that yearns to soar in to great deeds of beauty, love and daring and is burdened by the cross of a misshapen body or an unattractive face. Edmond Rostand captured the heartbreak and personal triumph for such a man in his enduring drama Cyrano De Bergerac.

Mademoiselle Fifi

A wide variety of tales and a shrewd understanding of all kinds of people earned the permanent place in literature of Guy De Maupassant. Many of his most penetrating character studies have become classics because his perceptions of human emotions is as real and as revealing today as it was in the times in which he lived. One such tale is Mademoiselle Fifi. Perhaps you will find a strong parallel in a much more recent conflict and occupation. The tale takes place in a small town in Northern France when the Bismarck's armies were over running the French empire...

Craig's Wife

Cecil B. DeMille says that Craig's Wife will probably remind all drama critics that women are unpredictable. Though the critics praised the drama when it opened on Broadway they all added wisely, "the women won't like it" but the unpredictable ladies loved it. A few months later George Kelly's play won Pulitzer Prize and then became a motion picture. In Lux's radio version you will hear the same fine actress who played Craig's wife on screen, Rosalind Russell. It is an honest play, the story of a woman who made the fatal mistake of letting love come second.

In Which We Serve

The slim grey shape of a destroyer is a thing of beauty as it knifes through the sea and a thing of power and fury with its guns ablaze. But look below the sealed shell and you'll find a heart and a personality intimately known to the captain on the bridge and to the men who are proud to be called destroyer sailors. One of the finest craftsmen of the theater of our times probed deep in to the heart of a destroyer and gave us the epic 1942 motion picture In Which We Serve. In fact Noel Coward not only wrote it, but also produced, directed and starred in the film.

In Which We Serve is the story of a ship that's true but the ship is a captain, a chief petty officer, a torpedo man and an ordinary seaman and their wives and mothers and sweethearts and children. His Majesty Ship Torrin is all these and a touch of Dunkirk and the North Sea and the battle of Crete and the story is told in the events that flashed through the minds of the crew as they cling to a life raft in the Mediterranean.

Originally when this Blue Network Program was broadcast on Sunday afternoons from New York in 1934 it was presented by Antony Stanford and featured hour long adaptations of Broadway plays, usually starring Broadway actors. But Lever Brothers, the show sponsors decided to move the show to Hollywood and so it was that on Monday June 1st 1936, Cecil B. De Mille the famous film director stepped forward to the microphone to introduce for the first time "Lux Presents Hollywood" brought to you by "Lux Radio Theatre". The format was similar, but different, in as much as the shows now became adaptations of films and sometimes featured the original stars, as did this first one, "The Legionnaire and the Lady" with Clark Gable and Marlene Dietrich, adapted from the film, "Morocco".

This show has atmosphere, it will take you right back to the days when you regularly visited your favorite movie theatre and became so involved with the story which was unfolding on the silver screen. It makes you realize the changes which have taken place throughout the world in this last fifty or sixty years with regard to heroes, ladies and love. The Phantom Of The Opera

In the year 1880 the old Paris Opera stood like a giant torch in the heart of the city a thousand windows ablaze with light but there were shadows too, shadows that flitted high in the gallery over the great stage. Shadows that lingered in the sub cellars far beneath the street where the black sewers of Paris ran sluggishly in the dark. But we were not concerned with these things or so we thought at the time, we of the opera knew only the light of the dressing room, the bright gaiety of the stage. It all began the night we sang Martha; the house was crowded and enthusiastic. There were no shadows that night. . .

The Plainsman

On the 9th of April in 1865 generals Lee and Grant met at a farmhouse in a courthouse in and signed a document whose words had been written in the lifeblood of nearly 500,000 Americans. The War Between the States was over. The signatures were scarcely dry when the eyes of the nation turned westward and saw beyond the Mississippi a fabulous empire yet untamed, a land of thundering bison herd and savage Indians. Into this territory poured the legions of Americans whose faith and fortune had been scattered by the war and the hordes of emigrants who flooded from Europe to stake their claims on the sweeping plains. Out of this background was borne the plainsman. Wild Bill Hickock was not an outlaw. He was a frontier marshal. Gentleman and the keenest shot in the west and always in his shadow was the equally compelling character, Calamity Jane.

War of the Worlds

No one would have believed in the middle of the twentieth century that human affairs were being watched keenly and closely by intelligences greater than mans. Yet across the gulf of space on the planet of Mars, intellects vast and cool and unsympathetic regarded our earth with envious eyes slowly and surely drawing their plans against us. Mars is more than 140 million miles from the sun and for centuries it has been in the last stages of exhaustion. The inhabitants of this planet looked across space with instruments of intelligence of which we have scarcely dreamed, searching for another world to which they could migrate. Their nearest world was giant Jupiter where the atmospheric pressure is thousands of pounds to the square inch, they could not go there. Nor to Saturn nor to Pluto, planets encased in eternal ice. They could not go to Neptune or Uranus twin worlds in eternal night and surrounded by unbreathable atmospheres of methane gas. They could not go to Mercury; its temperature is that of molten lead. Of all the worlds the intelligences on Mars could see and study, only our own warm earth was green with vegetation, ripe with water and possessed a cloudy atmosphere eloquent with fertility. It did not occur to mankind that a swift fate may be hanging over us and that it would come with the time of our nearest approach to the orbit to Mars that it would begin or over the mountains North East of California on a pleasant summer evening...

Gulliver's Travels

In 1727 when Jonathan Swift wrote Gulliver's Travels he intended it to be nothing more than a sharp and biting commentary on the customs and politics of his time but knowing the most dangerous truths could be told safely only under the mask of humor he veiled his attacks with the most imaginative of stories. And as a result his book did not die with the customs and men, which it ridiculed instead with the passage of two centuries, and more it has become more than just a brilliant satire. It has become in fact one of the greatest of all children's classics, a story to charm and delight the young of every generation and every century.

Three Soldiers

For most young American writers the period following the First World War was one of supreme disillusionment. Many had served in the war enlisting in the hope that they were helping to build a better world. And when that world did not materialize they suffered the inevitable reaction rebelling instinctively against the horrors of war and all the things that went with it. In Three Soldiers John Dos Passos tells the story of such a man named John Andrews a highly sensitive young musician whose nature brought him in to inevitable conflict with the regimentation of army life. Like all armies before it the American expeditionary force of 1917 and 1918 was less concerned with the personalities of its soldiers than with the necessity of winning highly impersonal battles.

Two Moods From The Past

Two Moods From The Past is two 15-minute stores, the first is Passion In The Desert written by Honore De Balzac starring John Larkin. Ten years ago while serving under the emperor Napoleon during his expedition in upper Egypt Pierre Martin had an adventure so fantastic that he has never told it to anyone. The memory of it makes him both proud and ashamed. During the campaign he was captured by the Arabs who took him deep in to the cavern of their camp and held him prisoner there. Because there was no place a man could go to even if he did get the idea the Arabs guarded him lightly. One night he escaped grabbed a rifle a dagger and a horse and rode off in to the desert...

Rogers Of The Gazette

Farm Sale Day

Rogers of the Gazette are heart-warming stories of a country newspaper and its friendly editor based in a small town called Illyria. Illyria is not a boomtown and a man looking to make a lot of money fast wouldn't give Illyria a second glance or even a first one to tell the truth. Illyria's prosperous in a nice solid kind of way; the farms around have good rich soil, the hogs are fat and there's chicken most every Sunday. The farmers sell in Illyria and they like to buy there too and the trade keeps moving along. To make sure the farmers don't forget to come to town once every year the merchants of Illyria have a farm sale day. It's also good for the Illyria Weekly Gazette too because Will and his assistant Maggie Button put out a special farm edition for the sale and all the merchants advertise.

Juvenile: The Adventures Of Superman

Faster than a speeding bullet! More powerful than a locomotive! Able to leap tall buildings at a single bound! Look! Up in the sky! It's a bird! It's a plane! It's SUPER-MAN!

Based on the comic created by Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster in 1938. Superman, disguised on earth as Clark Kent, "leads a never-ending battle for truth, justice, and the American way".

In the storyline the true identity of Superman was closely guarded by the producers. If any of the peripheral characters discovered that Clark Kent was Superman they always ended up being killed of either by accident or by disaster. This situation was also mirrored in the real world. It wasn't until 1946, six years into the run, that listeners discovered that Clayton Bud Collyer played the part of Superman.

Chandu The Magician was both one of the first great juvenile adventure shows and one of the last. In between the two runs of the series was a gap of twelve years, which meant the first run was pre-war by three years and the second run was post-war by three years.

Frank Chandler aka Chandu is a man equipped with special skills to help him fight the world's evil forces with occult powers and a far-reaching crystal ball. He spends most of his time battling the wicked Roxor, the villain that dominates both runs of the series.

Chandu The Magician was both one of the first great juvenile adventure shows and one of the last. In between the two runs of the series was a gap of twelve years, which meant the first run was pre-war by three years and the second run was post-war by three years.

Frank Chandler known in the secret places of the Far East as Chandu is a man equipped with special skills to help him fight the world's evil forces with occult powers and a far-reaching crystal ball. He spends most of his time battling the wicked Roxor, the villain that dominates both runs of the series.

Chandu is escapism at its best. It takes the listener to far-flung lands such as Egypt, Monrovia, and Algiers and maintains the magical pace through oriental music and a fast-paced plot. Episodes finish with cliffhanger endings leaving the listener eager to discover what happens next.

All in all, Chandu the Magician is good old-fashioned fun in serialized form.

Juvenile:

The Cinnamon Bear

Episode 001 - Paddy O'Cinnamon

This is the story of the Cinnamon Bear and his very marvellous adventures with the twins Judy and Jimmy Barton. Judy and Jimmy are writing to Santa Claus when mother comes in and asks them to go and look in the attic for the silver star for the top of the Christmas tree. The attic is cold and musty, but, in a great big trunk they find the smallest, cutest talking teddy-bear they have ever seen, and their adventures together begin.

Starring: Buddy Duncan

Broadcast Date: 29th November 1937

Episode 002 - Weary Willy

If you remember, the children went up into the attic to hunt for a missing Christmas tree ornament, the silver star. Whilst searching through an old trunk, they found a little cinnamon bear only four inches tall. He has told Judy and Jimmy how to degrow until they are just as small as he, so that they can all chase the crazy quilt dragon who has stolen their beautiful silver star out of the trunk.

Starring: Buddy Duncan

Broadcast Date: 30th November 1937

Episode 003 - Crazy Quilt Dragon

The twins and Cinnamon Bear are in Looking Glass Valley where their airplane was forced down after Weary Willy, the Stork, punched a hole in the fuel tank and gulped down all the soda-pop gas. They twins are very sad, Weary Willy has threatened to tell the Crazy Quilt Dragon that they are chasing him and now Cinnamon Bear has told them that there is no way out of Looking Glass Valley. What are they going to do?

Broadcast Date: 1st December 1937

Episode 004 - The Ikaboos

Judy and Jimmy and the Cinnamon Bear have cornered the Crazy Quilt Dragon on a cliff overlooking the root beer ocean. But, no amount of persuasion could make him hand over the silver star which he had stolen. So, nothing remained but to scare him, and scare him they did. But, what did he do but leap off the cliff and land in the ocean. They rush down to meet him but he dropped the silver star on the way down. . .

Episode 019 - Wooden Indian

More juvenile adventures set in a fantasy world where giants, pirates, dragons and witches live. An interesting fact about this very popular series is that nobody can remember the name of the boy who plays the part of Jimmy. If you should know, please do drop me a line.

Duration: 12:19

Broadcast Date: 17th December 1937

Episode 020 - Flying Hat

It's getting closer and closer to Christmas and Judy and Jimmy and their friends are still a long way from getting the Silver Star mended. Queen Melissa's last instructions directed them to the Golden Grove where they were supposed to find a most valuable clue underneath the Singing Tree. No sooner had they entered the Grove and started to look for the tree than right out of nowhere jumped that wicked old Wintergreen Witch. If only Judy hadn't given her looking glass to Chief-Cook-and-Bottle-Washer, the wooden Indian, she might have held it in front of the witches face and scared her like she did on the island of Obi. But when Wintergreen learnt that Judy no longer had the dreadful looking glass she decided to change the twins and Cinnamon Bear and the Crazy quilt dragon into bull frogs. And it looks like nothing in the world or Maybe land can stop her she just laughs and laughs and laughs.

Episode 021 - Snowman

Judy and Jimmy, with their friends the Cinnamon Bear and the Crazy Quilt Dragon, have made a marvelous discovery. As you will probably remember, they are still in the Golden Grove, where they were supposed to find an important clue under the singing tree. But that was practically impossible because all the trees in the Golden Grove looked exactly alike. Too tired to look further they fell asleep, and when they awakened, they discovered that they had been napping under the very tree that they were searching for. And that wasn't all they discovered, for right beside them stood an enormous silk hat with windows and a door in it. Pinned to the door was a note...

Episode 022 - Santa Claus

Well, the most magical and enormous flying hat landed Judy and Jimmy and their friends in a wonderful land of ice and snow. Just as Queen Melissa instructed they asked the first person they met where to find Nicky Frootle. He was a snowman, and told them that Mr. Frootle could be found in a white palace. Up the steps they went and were met by Nicky Frootle, a little elf dressed all in white fur. Nicky invited them in and led them to a door, a door which is just about to open on the gentleman who can tell them how to get their broken silver star fixed. And who do you think it is?

Episode 023 - The Bad Dolls

Judy and Jimmy and the Cinnamon Bear are in the snow country with Santa Claus. For a while everything looked pretty wonderful. Santa Claus bundled them into his specially private sleigh, and drove to Jack Frost's house. After examining the broken silver star, Jack took some magic snow cement, and before you could say "Jack Robinson", the star was back together again. However, it was necessary to let the cement to get good and solid. So Jack Frost left it on the windowsill, and what do you think? When Judy went back to look at the star, it was gone!

Episode 025 - Captain Tintop

Exciting things are happening in the snow country, where Judy and Jimmy and their friends the Cinnamon Bear and the Crazy Quilt Dragon are visiting with Santa Claus. You will remember that Santa ordered Captain Tintop and a detachment of tin soldiers to the icicle forest to battle the bad dolls who stole the silver star. Reports came back from the front that the enemy was being led by a strange unknown creature. A maybegramp, from Queen Melissa, flashed the news that the Winter Green Witch had escaped from her prison in Maybeland. Confident that Winter Green was leading the culprits, Santa rushed more men to the scene of the battle. Then, just as we left them last time, Nicky Frootle bounded in to announce that the soldiers had returned, victorious...

Episode 026 - North Pole

Well Christmas is practically here, and Judy and Jimmy are still without their precious silver star. Unless they get it back in time to put on the very tip-top of their tree, Christmas just won't be Christmas. You'll remember that after Captain Tiptop captured the star from the bad dolls, Santa Claus gave a grand banquet. The children were filled with excitement and Paddy O'Cinnamon was filled with cinnamon buns! Santa was about to leave on his annual trip to the world, he offered to take the twins and the Cinnamon Bear with him. And then the most terrible thing happened...

Juvenile: The Cisco Kid

The Cisco Kid was a juvenile western adventure. In many ways it was the radio show equivalent to the western B-movies of the time, complete with what sound distinctly like coconuts for horses hooves and wonderfully cheesy Mexican accents – “Oh, Ceesco, perhaps they will keel heem”.

The show follows the on-going adventures of the Cisco Kid and Pancho, his loyal companion. Many of the stories follow a predictable theme, usually involve a good fight, and end up with Cisco getting the girl, or at least a kiss for his troubles.

The seedy looking man whose armband bore the word "usher" could hear the fight crowd cheering in the arena. But after looking at his watch, he turned his attention to the rear door of the arena, the one that led into the alley. A man called Phil stepped inside followed by three figures, well dressed, the collars of their expensive overcoats were turned up half covering their faces, and their hats were pulled down over their eyes. Thus begins this episode of The Green Hornet. (Reviewed by Kitty)

Jerry Of The Circus

Episode 001 - Letter For Sam Randall

Broadcast in 1937, each episode of Jerry of the circus is approximately 15 minutes long and are stories set around characters of the circus and their lives. Young Jerry turns up at the circus in search of Sam Randall the circus boss. Randall informs him they've no jobs at present then Jerry hands him a letter from his late father Tim Duggan. Sam Randall knew Tim from years ago "a great showman". He read the letter, "If things don't break and I'm gone before you get here take care of the kid. He's been brought up with horses, the circus is in his blood." So that begins the tales of Jerry and the circus.

Jonathan Thomas Christmas On The Moon

(01) Santa Claus Is Kidnapped By The Squeebublians

This is the story of a wee little boy who has just turned six, and what happened to him is not just fiddlesticks, for right here we make the promise, it could've happened to you if you were not you, but instead were Jonathan Thomas who said his prayers, every night up-stairs, and jumped in to bed clear up to his head and snuggled and juggled and ruggled and chuggled because Christmas wasn't very far off. And was as good as he could as other boys would if Christmas was coming so soon. For if he was bad and not merry and glad his dad would not like such a lad and be sad and even a bit mad and not read fairy tales in his room for the moon disgustingly listened to his weepings and his wails. But here is the story and it's true don't you worry, 'cos remember I made you the promise it's as true as true blue and could've happened to you if it hadn't happened to Jonathan Thomas. . .

Tim Meets Jump Jump

Tim, a little orphan decides to set off and follow the North Star to the North Pole so that he can ask Santa if he plans to visit everyone at Christmas. He sets off in to the woods and after walking for some time he lays down to rest and just as he is getting comfortable something taps him on his knee. It was the tiny little elf Jump Jump who jumps up and down, backwards and forwards and sideways and who talks so funny and so fast that you can't understand him all the time.

Juvenile: Jungle Jim

This fifteen minute juvenile adventure show, based on the Alex Raymond comic strip in Hearst's Comic Weekly, was broadcast on a weekly basis for many years. Week-by-week it followed the trials and tribulations of Jungle Jim Bradley, the intrepid adventurer. Interestingly, the first episode of the series not only continued the story line of Flash Gordon, which was another Hearst strip, but also used the same theme music.

Buyers Beware

In the early years of the Western United States the local Sheriffs were powerless against the bands of outlaws that roamed the frontier. The honest settlers often took the law in to their own hands and a man accused was a man convicted. The primitive courts were ignored and hanging for even minor crimes was an every day occurrence. It was then the Lone Ranger fought to prove that justice and violence could not exist side by side. It was a force of his example, his strength and courage that held the pioneers true to the American ideal and finally made possible the winning of the West.

From Outer Space

Early in the nineteenth century, a meteor hurtling through space plunged into the atmosphere surrounding the Earth. Heated to incandescence it streaked as a ball of fire through the night skies over California, approaching at an incredible speed, it crashed into the ground. Some sixty years later a group of scientists and government officials held a meeting behind closed doors. Samples of the meteor had been stolen in transit - twice - and the only man who could help them now was the Lone Ranger.

Diamond of Asher Episode 01 of 39

"The following inaugural chapter of the new Tarzan radio series brings to radio and to Tarzans many thousands of friends an entirely new story of strange and thrilling adventure entitled Tarzan & The Diamond of Asher."

Jane Porter, her father Samuel T Philander and Cecil Clayton have left Africa. Clayton subsequently has confessed that he is not the true Lord Greystoke and has died aboard ship. And so Tarzan of the apes' mighty hunter lord of the jungle has come in to his name and title, John Clayton Lord of Greystoke. Tarzan and his friend Paul D'Arnot French naval lieutenant of the African patrol service have travelled up the coast to Luango a French African port where D'Arnot is awaiting a ship to take him back to France. Tonight we find the two friends at the close of dinner in the grill of the Metroplote Hotel discussing future plans...

Drum Without A Heart

As everyone knows most of Africa swelters beneath the tropical sun and yet in the very heart of central Africa astride the equator is the Ruinzory mountain range, which is never without snow, ice and raging torrents of glacial rivers. In a small café in Nairobi there was a man whose great ambition it was to climb Ruinzory. No, with Jean Le Clare it was more than an ambition it was a passion...

Fires of Tohr Episode 01 of 39

A hot red sun burns its swift way down through the west its broad orange shafts painting in bold relief grey balls of giant trees. Four whites, their bodies only half covered by ragged trail worn clothing cut their way through a dense mass of tangled undergrowth and emerge in to a small natural clearing. Four exhausted whites, three men and a young woman, all that remains of the once great Burton-Ashley expedition which left Nairobi many weeks back with a long queue of Amazulu fighting men, Swahili trackers and Uganda carriers to plunge in to the trackless jungles of South Central Africa in search of the ancient and forgotten city of Tohr. The little party consists of Major Burton-Ashley, head of the enterprise, Jeanette Burton his American ward, Terrance O'Rourke a happy go-lucky adventurer and the inscrutable Chinese scientist Dr Wong Tai. As they break through in to the clearing the noises of the great jungle seem for the moment hushed to a mere echo of blurred sounds...

While resting on the bank of a swift flowing stream in an un-chartered section of the south central African jungle, Tarzan and D'Arnot, Major Burton-Ashley, Jeanette Burton, Dr Wong-Tai and Terence O'Rourke are captured by a band of half human giants. They escape and take to the river in a crude dugout. Carried around the bend a precipitous wall of rock towering a hundred feet above the stream confronts them. Calling from cave like openings with which the cliff is honeycombed are scores of the yellow savages. Yelling fiendishly the half human monsters scramble down the face of the precipice to congregate on the high banks of the river. Rushed forward in the fearful drift of the current, menaced on all sides by the yellow skinned monsters the dugout speeds straight as an arrow towards a narrow black opening in the base of the wall...

Carried through a mountain on the surface of an underground river Tarzan and his friends are captured by a band of yellow giants. Mounted on elephants the entire company is transported to the distant city of Tohr where the captives are taken before Ahtea, queen of the yellow men. Their audience with Ahtea is interrupted by the arrival of Tongo, a chief of the Tohr men, several of whom have been killed by Tarzan's party. Ahtea informs Tarzan that the laws of Tohr permit a chief to claim the right of avenging the death of any of his men by personal combat with the one who has slain them. She adds that Tongo has come to claim that right. Tarzan accepts the challenge and stands quietly awaiting the attack of the giant yellow man.

Quiz Show: Information, Please

A new type of question and answer game in which the public quiz the professionals. The public are invited to send in questions with their answers and if they are used on the show the sender gets $2. Further more if the professionals get them wrong the sender gets a further $5. The show was created and run by Dan Golenpaul whose idea was to reverse the typical type of quiz show by allowing an intelligent, educate public ask the questions and put the alleged authorities on the spot. He certainly got the mix right by employing Clifton Fadiman as moderator of a panel of four experts, which would always include 2 or 3 regulars and guest personalities. Fadiman himself came from a background in books being a book critic for the New Yorker. Other regulars included Science writer Bernard Jaffe, professor of philosophy Dr Harry Overstreet, Marcus Duffield of the New York Herald-Tribune and later John Kieran a sport's columnist for the New York Times and Oscar Levant a pianist and composer. What all of these had in common was their broad interests and knowledge and quick and slicing wit. The intellectual questions were a catalyst for talk and the hilarious humor that emerged. "An uproarious error or a brilliant bit of irreverence was rated far above any dull deliverance of the truth," wrote John Kieran, one of the four major personalities. Go ahead and sample any of these shows and I guarantee you won't be disappointed.

Quiz Show: It Pays To Be Ignorant

A quiz show spoof that lampooned other quiz shows of the time such as Information, Please and The Quiz Kids. The format of the show was simple. Three nitwits made up the "board of experts". They spent more time trying to figure out what the question was than actually giving a sensible answer. The questions were as ludicrous as "For what meal do we wear a dinner jacket?"

Critics slated the show when it first appeared and said it wouldn't last. They were wrong. The show ran for nine years.
